Perry Township has a woman who goes about her work in a genuine mannish way. She is Miss Frances Cadero, twenty. Alone she manages a seventy-five-acre farm, including the care of six horses and several cows. This spring she put out ten acres of corn and several acres of oats. Along with this she "broke" two colts.

Her father ill, her mother unable to look after the farm, and her brothers all away, she shouldered the burden of managing the farm. She began three years ago. She discards woman's apparel and wears trousers in the field and in the barn. She has grown strong and healthy.
